

Finding the right support

This leaflet provides suggestions that could be helpful to cancer patients and carers who may be looking for additional support. Many people who have cancer say that they have a wide range of emotions and thoughts both expected and unexpected. Everyone is different and you will deal with things in your own way. The options below provide a range of choices so you can pick the one that may suit you best.

Relaxation sessions

Breathing exercises, visualisation and relaxation techniques designed for those living with cancer. No need to book, just join us in the Lynda Jackson Macmillan Centre (LJMC) on:

Mondays 2:30 - 4:00 pm
Tuesdays 10:00 - 11:30 am
Thursdays 11:00 - 12:30 pm

Complementary therapies

Treatments to relieve stress, aid relaxation and reduce anxiety. Therapies include reflexology, aromatherapy, ear acupuncture, Indian head massage and reiki.

Please speak with a member of the LJMC drop-in team for a referral to the Complementary therapy team.

LJMC drop-in listening service

Trained volunteers and health care professionals are always available to listen and discuss patient/carer concerns.

Counselling

The emotional impact of a cancer diagnosis can present serious challenges for patients and people close to them. It can result in high levels of worry, anxiety, depression, a lack of self confidence or esteem and inability to concentrate as well as triggering anxiety and problems from the past. You may find it helpful to talk through what you are experiencing with a trained counsellor/psychologist who can help people find a way forward.

Counselling is available from a variety of services that may be available in the area where you live. Please look at the back of this page for a list of services and how to contact them.

Courses for patients and carers when treatment has finished

There are courses to help patients and carers to build on their existing strengths and move forward after the cancer treatment has finished. Please see information on the back of this page to help choose the course that may be best for you. Referral forms for the courses are available from LJMC.
