

How do I get started?

Ask a member of staff to fill out a referral form available at the LJMC.

You will initially be offered an assessment meeting with someone from the counselling team. At this point you may wish to discuss whether individual or group art psychotherapy would best suit your needs.

If you decide you would like to go ahead, an appointment will be made for you as soon as a space is available.

This leaflet has been written in collaboration with oncologists, health professionals, patients and carers at Mount Vernon Cancer Centre.

If you have difficulty reading this size of print, a version of this leaflet or any of our leaflets can be produced for you in a larger print.

Art psychotherapy at Mount Vernon Cancer Centre

What is art psychotherapy?

In art psychotherapy, art materials are used as a way to express thoughts and feelings which may be difficult to put into words.

The artwork is made during your session with a trained art psychotherapist – her role is to provide a caring and safe environment so you can feel comfortable to express yourself both verbally and creatively.

It will be up to you to decide how much you wish to reflect and talk about the artwork.

Art psychotherapy is part of the counselling service offered by the Lynda Jackson Macmillan Centre.

Our art psychotherapists have an approved post-graduate qualification in art psychotherapy and are registered with the Health and Care Professions Council (HCPC).

Do I need to be good at art?

No. Being good at art is not required to be able to benefit from art psychotherapy.

The art psychotherapist can support you in the use of different art materials. However, it is not an art lesson - your artwork will not be judged in any way.

'Some days feel really difficult, but I always leave art therapy feeling a lot calmer'

How can art psychotherapy help me?

Art psychotherapy can offer psychological support with many issues which may arise when faced with a cancer diagnosis.

Some of the issues may include reactions to diagnosis, altered body image, isolation, loss of meaning and changes in relationships.

As well as giving psychological support, art psychotherapy can provide a creative experience which can enhance a person's quality of life and general well-being.

'When I first came to the hospital, I have to admit it felt a scary place - but coming to the art therapy group has made it a friendly place'

Does art psychotherapy take place in a group?

Art psychotherapy can take place in either a group or within individual sessions. You can discuss your preference with the counsellor at your initial counselling assessment appointment.

The Art Therapy Group Programme runs 3 or 4 times throughout the year. These currently take place on Wednesdays between 2 - 4pm and run at the same time for 6 weeks.

Individual Art Psychotherapy sessions run throughout the year on Mondays and Wednesdays. All sessions are held at the Lynda Jackson Macmillan Centre during drop in hours.

For any queries about either individual or group art psychotherapy services please speak to staff at LJM Drop in or counselling team.

Can I access art psychotherapy as an inpatient?

Art psychotherapy may be available to patients during their stay on the wards at Mount Vernon Cancer Centre.

Ward staff can support you to make a referral to the LJM.

How many sessions will I need?

We usually offer up to six sessions.

The number of sessions will depend upon your needs and situation. Sometimes a single session may be all that is needed.
